POOJA: What it is!

Performing pooja is a way to recite the virtues of the Teerthankars (the 24 teachers of Jain Dharma in this era) and remind ourselves that we also possess these virtues. (Siddha Swaroopo-ham). Worldly desires and attachments keep us trapped in continuous cycle of birth and death in this world, but by following the path of the Teerthankars we can also be freed from the miseries of this world and attain Moksha. Atleast one pooja is considered ESSENTIAL every day without fail.

While there are many poojas dedicated to individual Teerthankars, these are not the only kind of poojas. The foremost of the poojas is Dev-Shastra-Guru Pooja, dedicated to the three most revered religious teachers: Teerthankars (dev), Jain Scriptures (shastra), and Jain saints and monks (guru). Complete faith in these three leads to Samyak Darshan (Perfect Faith) and, ultimately, to Moksha. Thus, this pooja includes all the worshipable objects.

The Nav Devta Pooja is dedicated to the nine icons of Jain religion; e.g., the five Par-mesthis - Arihantas, Siddhas, Acharyas, Upadhyayas, and Sadhus, Jin Dharm (the Jain Dharma), Jin Aagam (Jain Scriptures), Jin Chaitya (idols of Teerthankars) and, Jin Chaitya-lay (Jain Temple).

Certain poojas are associated with special occasions, commemorable days or religious festivals. These include: Ashtahnik pooja, Das Lakshan Dharm-Pooja, Kalyanak pooja, Diwali Pooja, Raksha Bandhan Pooja, etc. Some poojas are specifically performed to revise the knowledge of specific sets of principles, teachings, beliefs or basic tenets of Jainism, such as the Ratn-traya Pooja and Solah Karan Pooja); while some poojas intend worships or honor of holy sites of pilgrimage in Jainism (such as the Panch Meru Pooja). Each of these poojas is done at specific times throughout the year and they all help to maintain and re-strengthen our faith in our Dharma.

Each pooja is concluded by reciting an Adoration (the Jaya Mala). In Jaya Mala, we recall the virtues of worshipped object (Teerthankars, Religious events, festivals, spiritual leaders, Jain beliefs, holy lands, etc.). By reciting these virtues, we remind ourselves of the greatness of Jain Dharma, and, that our soul, just as all others, possesses the capacity of attaining Moksha, a goal towards which we should strive daily.

ASHT-DRAVYA

All pooja are done with the eight substances (ashta-dravya). These are as under:

1. JAL

Jal (pure water) is offered aiming to rid oneself of the cycle of birth, aging and death. Every living being is continuously traveling through the the univers in various forms, repeatedly enduring the miseries of birth and death. Jal reminds us to live life as pure as water in the hopes of one day attaining liberation from this cycle in Moksha. (Janm Jara Mrityu Vinashnay)

2. CHANDAN

Chandan (sandal or saffron water) is offered to reduce the suffering that our being endures in this world. It provides a natural cooling effect, proving relief from the worldly anguish. (Sansaar taap vinashnay)

3. AKSHAT

Akshat (pure white rice) means terminated, rid of end; like the rice, once removed from its husk, does not give life to another rice grain, once the soul leaves the cycle of birth and death by attaining its purest form, it no more returns to this cycle. Akshat Is offered in the hope of one day attaining the endless bliss of Moksha. (Akshay pad praptaay)

4. PUSHP

Pushp (saffron-colored rice) literally means flower and symbolizes the sensual pleasures of this world. By offering this, we are abandoning all worldly desires and passions, which lead to the influx of karmas. (Kaam-baan Vidhvans-naay). Saffron-colored rice is used instead of flowers to avoid the violence to both the flowers and insects as associated with picking flowers.

5. NAIVEDYA

Naivedya (pieces of dry coconut) means tasty food offered with the goal of getting rid of the disease of hunger, the principal deterrent in conquering five senses, necessary for attaining Moksha. Offering it signifies the hope of worshipper to be able to control and, ultimately, eliminate the desire for food. (Kshudhha rog Vinas-naay). Dry coconut Pieces are used for avoiding violence in rotting of actual food.

6. DEEP

Deepak (saffron-colored pieces of dry coconut or a diya (oil lamp)) On the journey towards liberation, deep is offered so that the darkness of ignorance and false beliefs by which we are surrounded in this world is destroyed. (Moh-andhakar Vinash-naay). Dry coconut Pieces are used for avoiding violence in burning of oil lamp.

7. DHOOP

Dhoop (clove/sandal dust) is offered to destroy the eight karmas, which will lead to Moksha. (Asht-karma Vindhvansanaay).

8. PHAL

Fruit (almonds, clove, coconut, etc) Moksha is considered the ultimate Fruit. We offer them to get this fruit. (Moksh Phal Praptay). Whole almonds, cloves and coconuts are preferred over fresh fruit to avoid violence in harming insects and the impurity of decaying fruits.

ARGHYA

Arghya (mixture of the eight substances above), after completing the the worship by offering above 8 individual substances is also offered, with the hope of attaining Moksha (Anarghya pad Praptaye). Also, the Arghya alone can be offered instead of complete pooja with all eight dravyas in case of paucity of time.

START WORSHIP

Consequent to Abhishek and return of the idol on its seat in Veditakjee, the process of worship is initiated by recital of the verses as below:
